WHERE BEAUTY REIGNS.

Twice during the past week did the Pintsburg Clubhouse) resound to levely strains of music and the merry sounds of inine voices mingled with the deeper tones of the regular devotees of the club. The Assembly ball Friday night, was the first call this season for the select 400 that comprise the creme de la creme, of Pittsburg, and right royally did they respond to the call. Carriage after carriage rolled up to the curb, from which the awaing stretched to the side entrance, and deposited their burdens of lovelsness and beauty. The various rooms of the clubhouse, had under the florist's care, assumed a most attractive appearance, in honor of the occasion. The mic of Toerge Bros.' Orchestra was audible, but the musiciaus were not visible, for the tropical and other foliage plants with which the stage was decorated screened them from the view of the dancers. The contumes of the lades were simply bewildering in their lovell-ness, and the air was heavy with the fragrance of the exquisite flowers of which their bouquets ness, and the air was heavy with the risplanes of the exquisite flowers of which their bouquets were composed.

The refreshments, the choicest imaginable, were served on the first floor, under the supervision of the chal's chef. Daintily ribbon-tied means were the soureaints of the occasion. The tables were simply works of art, both in the floral and enlinary line. "Clover" and the "Brigands," late operatic airs, inspired the dancers, and the favors were unique trinkets, including pretty card cases, photograph holders, after trifles and the like.

The most interesting place in the clubbouse was the ladies' dressing room. It more than revisied the ball room proper. The ladies were truly bewitching as they entered, robed in their luxurious carriage wraps, and their bright eyes gree brighter still, when merry greetings were exchanged, as the dusky maidees releved them of their wrappings and for the carriage felts substituted the tiny white, pink, blue, tan and green dancing slippers, which were often, judging from the remarks, just a trifle sing.

PANORAMA OF BEAUTY.

PANORAMA OF REAUTY.

Such a variety of lovely ladies, in such exquisitely fashioned gowns, of so many colors, darried the vision and Intoxicated the senses; but, in the bewildered condition occasioned by but, in the bewildered condition occasioned by fich black velvet, with a wonderfully handsome diamond botterfly in her soft gray hair, needed but a scepter to complete her costume and make her the queen that her stately walk and queenly bearing suggested. The other, a much rounger lady, was irresistibly fascinsting in a clinging, soft, delicate pink orepe du chene gown, fashioned in the Grecian style, which enhanced her bright brunette beauty until she was a perfect Juno.

The young gentleman who was escorting the laquisitive damsel carried her off to the ballm for fear she would get a peep into Blueard's chamber or some other one equally as cred from feminine eyes.

MISS RHODES' DEBUT.

younger members of Pittsburg society were all invited to the ball given by Mrs. ina Ehodes last Tuesday evening, at which her daughter Miss Annie was launched into the whiri of fashionable society. This formed the second important event in social circles and was the occasion of a great display of pretty gowns and bright smiles. The assembly room of the club house was radiant with rare exotics the occasion, and mirth and galety bunded as it did later in the week at the sembly ball. The young lady was assisted in pleasant task of making a formal debut by number of very prominent society ladies and mother and sister.

SABER AND MUSKET.

SURGEONS WILEY and Brumbaugh, of the Eighteenth, examined a number of recruits at the headquarters on Fifth avenue last Thurs-day night.

BATTERY B had a well-attended drill last Thursday night. Captain Hunt has issued or-ders requiring a better attendance on the part of the men.

THE famous Cosmopolitan Rifle Club, of the First Brigade, which has a record of never being defeated in contests, has been reorganized in Philadelphia. Two elections will be held in the Eighteenth Regiment this week, one in Company F, to-morrow evening for First Lieutenant, and one in Company D, Tuesday evening for Second Lieutenan.

THE drum corps of the Fourteenth Begiment was inspected last night at their armory. The Board of Officers of the regiment has decided to spend a listic money in putting the corps on a better basis. A NUMBER of military overcoats were stolen ont of the Quartermaster's room of Company G, on Penn avenue, some time within the past two weeks. Captain Penny proposes to give the miscreants the full benefit of the law if THE Second Brigade Examining Board again omes to the front by refusing to pass Michael Otto, the candidate for the commission of Second Lieutenant is Company B, Eighteenth Regiment. Another election has been ordered for December 18.

THE Washington Infantry will turn out this afternoon to attend the funeral of one of its oidest members. Captain James Chaifant. He has been a member of the company for many years, also having served with an honorable record during the late war.

REPORTS from each regiment in the Second Brigade of the number of 45 caliber rifles on hand are to be forwarded to Brigade Quarter-master Greenland this week in order that he may make a proper distribution of the new lot of rifles lately received from Washington, COLONEL HAWKINS, of the First Onio Regi ment, has been appointed Adjutant General of the State by Governor Campbell. He has quite a record both in the National Guard and dun-ing the war, and it is to be hoped he will be as successful as his prodecessor, General Axine. CORPORAL TROMAS COUGHLAN, of Company E. Eighteenth Regiment, was elected Second Lieutenant of the company, last Tuesday night. His opponent was Corporal Giltoyle. Tairty-two men and two officers were present, and it took three ballots to break the division. INSPECTOR OF RIPLE PRACTICE CRITCH-FIELD, of the Tenth Regiment, reports that during the season just closed he has qualified 257 men as marksmen, which is an increase over last year of 118. Company E, of Mt. Pieasant, did the best work, heading the list with nine sharpshooters. INSPECTOR OF RIFLE PRACTICE BROWN, of the Fourteenth Regiment, reports 245 men as the number qualified during the past season. Several of the companies were slow in sending in their scores, which accounts for the delay in the report. Company A, Captain Schmidt, did the Dest work, having a total of 52 marksmen.

THE annual State allowance for the various companies in the Second Brigade will arrive this week. The money was forwarded from Brigade headquarters last Friday. This will be cheerful news for company commanders, and also for numerous tandlords who are waiting most patiently or otherwise for their last year's

No official announcement has yet been made by Colonel Perchment as to who will receive the appointment of Quartermaster in the Four the appointment of Quartermaster in the Four-teenth, but it is pretty generally understood that Quartermaster Sergeant Beam will receive the commission. A number of other changes on Colonel Perchment's staff are understood to be on the tapla. THE following are the civil officers elected in the Washington Infantry for the ensuing year: President, A. P. Shannon; Financial Secretary, Tressuent, A. F. Shannon; Financial Secretary, G. F. Williams; Recording Secretary, V. Wise; Treasurer, W. R. Gulfuss. Among new features that will be inaugurated for the coming year will be the establishing of a camp fund to pay the expenses of next summer's trip. The assessment will be 50 cents per week.

THE members of Washington Infantry will meet at i.P. M. to-day to attend the funeral of their late comrade, Chaptain James Chalfant. Captain Chalfant was a hero of two wars, having served in Mexico with the old Jackson naving served in mexico with the old Jackson Independent Blues, and during the late war in the One Hundred and First Pennsylvania Volunteers. For years he was an officer on the city police force, and was highly respected for bis quiet, gentlemanly disposition. One of his last requests was that he be escorted to his grave by the Washington Infantry.

By common consent the Inspectors of Rifle Practice of the various organizations throughout the State, have written to Colonel Watres, the Grand Inspector, asking that the yearly report for the past season be published separately from the Adjutant General's report, as last year, although the season suded November 20, 1886, no accurate news of what had been done was received until a few weeks ago, when the much delayed report of the Adjutant General was published.

AT the last meeting of the Board of Control of the Eighteenth Regiment, Paymaster W. H. Davis was tendered a vote of thanks by the officers present for the masterly report he handed in concerning the projected armory. Captain Davis has certainly given most valuable assistance in securing the Fifth Avenue Market House for the regiment and battery, and both organizations cannot give him too much credit for his efforts in their behalf. It is understood the lease was finally signed by Mr. Bigelow yesterday afternoon for a term of 50 years, and the securing of funds will be commenced at once. A number of prominent gentlemen have already volunteered their financial assistance, and the outlook is most brilliant for the contractors to go to work by April I. officers present for the masterly report Much interest is felt in the engagement of Clara Morris at the Bijou Theater this week. It has been three years since she was last here. All reports from the East state that she is now in a vastly improved condition of health, and that with her increased physical strength, her artistic work, always remarkable for its intensity, is even still nore so. She will be seen here in her three favorite roles: "Camille," Renee De Moray' and "Helene," a new play written for her by a young American lady, Miss Martha Morton. This play is one of remarkable quali-ties, being intensely ingenious in its construc-tion and uniting with the peculiar character necessary to display the powers of the great actress, considerable comedy element. Her supporting company is by far the best she has ever had headed by Fredric de Believille and ever had, headed by Fredric de Believine and including such well known players of the first-class as J. That popular comedian, Mr. Nat C. Goodwin will appear at the Opera House next week in his latest and said to be his greatest success, his latest and said to be his greatest success, entitled "A Gold Mine." From our exchanges we learn the play has made a success, both East and West. In the leading role, it is said, that of Silas K. Woolcott, Mr. Goodwin finds a character more soited to his various talents than any he has ever impersonated. Favorite as he is here, and appearing in this higher class of work, he ought to do well. The dialogue is said to be brilliant and worthy that of any modern comedy. It is stated that Mr. Bronson Howard called it the "best written piece he had seen for years;" and Mr. Dion Bonelcault gave it even higher praise, for he declared it to be the "best American comedy he had ever seen. he had ever seen.

The powerful drama of "My Partner" will be at Harris' Theater this week. The play is certainly the best effort of the renowned dramatist the late Bartley Campbell. The company is composed of first-class people capable of giving the drama in a thoroughly satisfactory manner.

A strong attraction comes to the Academy next week. The Lester and Williams London Specialty Company includes the pick and choice of variety talent, a galaxy of stars of the first magnitude. Among them is Madame Jutan, one of the most daring women in the world.
Her flights in mid-air are something to take one's breath away. She is beside an uncommonly handsome and shapely woman. Then there are the favorites Lester and Williams, Sam De Vere, Shedman Brothers and the inimitable Imro Fox, beside other well-known experts and specialists.

Lovers of the drama, of real art and merit and womanly beauty, will be given a rare treat and womanly beauty, will be given a rare treat in the appearance here this week of the beautiful and accomplished actress, Mrs. Scott-Siddons. Since her absence from the city, a little over two years, Mrs. Siddons has met with wonderful success everywhere she has appeared. Among her costumes (Mrs. Siddons always appearing in appropriate attire during her readings and recitations) are some of the finest that have been seen on the stage for years. The sale of seats for the entertainment, which takes place at Lafayette Hall, Friday evening, December 18, will commence at 9 o'clock to morrow morning at R. S. Davis & Co.'s stationery store, No. 96 Fifth avenue. If Mrs. Siddon's last performance here may serve as an indication, it would be well for those desiring seats to call early.

HARRY ROWE and company will produce Othello at Youngstown, O., December 21, Canton, O., December 25, and Akron, O., January 1, 1890, under the management of James Col-lina. Mr. Rows will be supported by Charles Fischer as Iago, James Durham as Cassio, Lottle Veazey as Deademona, Sadie Rigby as Emilia, and J. Harry Rows as Othello.

First impressions go a long way, and al-though the New York public and press pro-nounce Mr. Charles Wyndham's performance of "David Garrick" pleasing and painstaking, they arow their preference for him in light comedy. By the way, Mr. Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore, on the termination of their American tour, will once more appear before a Berlin audience playing "The Headless Man," under the direction of Herr Lautenberg.

ERMA ALBANI, her husband, Ernest Gye, EMMA ALBANI, her husband, Ernest Gye, and Francesco Tamagno, the Italian tenor, all arrived from Europe last Monday. They will at once proceed to Chicago, where Madam Albani and Bignor Tamagno are to open the present tour in "Faust." The company is one of Henry E. Abbey's enterprises, and is booked for four weeks in Chicago, after which they will fill engagements in Mexico and California. Madam Albani will not appear in New York until the end of the season at the Metropolitan Opera House.

"OH! these American critics," cries a London paper, "what a wealth of expression they have paper, "what a wealth of expression they have at their command. For instance, one enthusiastic scribe finds that Mrs. Kendal's charm 'is astic scripe finds that Mrs. Kendal's charm is in some sense beamy.' We have heard of a lady's charms being described as 'erummy,' but we have to confess with the deepest humilistion that 'beamy' is a term of sdmiration totally unknown to us. Stay, the author of 'Alice in Wonderland' has written some never-to-be-forgotten verses commencing with 'Come to my arms, my beamish boy.' The beamy and beamish doubtless mean one and the same thing, and are evidently meant complimentary."

Manager Guttow of the Bijon instructed

MANAGER GULICE, of the Bijon, instructed Mr. Tim Carroll, the scene artist, about a Mr. Tim Carroll, the scene artist, about a month ago to prepare some special scenery for the engagement of Miss Clara Morria, and Mr Carroll in so doing excelled all of his former efforts. There is a parlor set that is said to be the finest ever seen in Pittsburg. It was draped under the personal supervision of Mr. Gulick, and the scenery and draperies certainly reflect credit on the management of the popular Bijou. A well-known manager remarked in Cincinnati last week that there would be a fence built around the Bijou next season and it was getting to be such a money-maker that it would be called R. M. Gulick & Co.'s National Bank.

-George Engan Montgomery thinks it awfully hard for a newspaper critic to tell the truth. He writes in the New York Mirror: To assume that a newspaper critic can rise to the frigid dignity of absolute truth is to assume frigid dignity of absolute truth is to assume that he is eager to suffer the torments of a partyr. He must, in the first place, seclude highest from agreeable intercourse with actors, unless he has the courage to shake an actor by the hand one day and expose the actor's pretentions the next. He must be willing to accommodate his soughilities to the black theatrical managers. He must consent to be discussed as a toad in the puddle of fournalism, as one whose hand is lifted against his follows, as a thief of the rights of others. He must brace himself with the conviction that he is the spokesman of justice, and he must not whimper if his intentions make him inexpressibly unpopular.

Two members of the "Fasqination" company, says the Mirror, have been causing the rest of the organization much wonderment. They are Gus Cook, who plays Lord Sum, and Harold Russell, who plays Lord Etly. Ever since the beginning of the season, as soon as the curtain touches the singe after the second act, these two acters have placed their hands upon their hearts, bowed in a stately manner to each other and then walked majestically away. This amused the company for a long while. First one noticed it, then another, until finally it ceased to amuse, and began to excite curiosity. At last one of the company inquired of Mr. Cook the meaning of the pantonimic action. "We only wish to show that we bear each other no malice," he said, "as you know it is my most unhappy duty as Lord Sam to throw Mr. Russel about the stage at the end of the act. My entreaties to the siage manager to permit me to leave this out are of no avail. What, then, shall id to show Mr. Russell that I bear him no malice? In Europe, and in France, especially, when the actors light a duel on the stage, they bow to each other when the curtain falls to show that there is no ill feeling. Perhaps our conduct will reach France, and we will some day be made members of the Comedie Francalse."

PICTURES AND PAINTERS.

MR. A. BRYAN WALL, who has been sketching among the mountains for some time past, was expected to arrive home last evening-ONE of the finest works in the way of an etching that has been published for some time past is that entitled "Breakers," by Otis Weber, a picture that shows a splendid effect of curl-ing and tossing waves.

A NUMBER of small water-color paintings by Mr. D. B. Walkley are shown at Mayer's. They are small pictures, very cleverly handled, as are most of Mr. Walkley's efforts in this line of work. The subjects are all of a simple charac-ter, indeed they should be called studies rather than complete victores, but they are just such bright little bits of color effect as are unsur-passed for lending an air of brightness and cheerfulness to a room.

"MAGNOLIA" is the title of a work by Mr. James R. Woodwell that is really a marine view, consisting as it does of little else but sea and sky with but a glimpse of distant shore. The picture is a very pleasing one with an effect of caimness and repose: the waters stilled beneath a quiet dreamy sky. Mr. Woodwell's happy faculty of combining a few simple forms into a striking and effective picture is seen to advantage in this work, which, slight as it may seem, bears evidence of very careful study.

MR. WILL S. RETNOLDS exhibits a painting MR. WILL S. REYNOLDS exhibits a painting at Gillespie's in which the degree of technical excellence is scarcely in keeping with the character of the subject. The scene represented is the exterior of a small cottage shown in the midst of a wintry landscape. Near the door of the cottage may be seen the figure of a little girl who apparently is experiencing some difficulty in making headway against the force of the wind. The subject is a good one, but it is too hard and stiff in handling, and is too meager of detail to make an effective picture.

MR. GEORGE HETEL has a very pleasing little landscape exhibited at Boyd's. In respect of composition, the work is unique and spect of composition, the work is unique and of a character quite different from the class of subjects usually chosen by this artist. It is neither a woodland scene nor yet an open landneither a woodland scene nor yet an open landscape, but partakes somewhat of the nature of both. In the foreground are some fine old trees, and looking out from among them the eye travels over green and sunny fields until the view is again obstructed, by others in the distance. The handling is in the style with which all admirers of works by Heizel are familiar, and it has been carried to a considerable degree of finish and elaboration of detail.
Light and shade form an important feature of this painting; in fact light and shade and composition constitute its principal features as a work of art, and their being so well managed renders the picture a very effective one.

It is not every day that we can obtain a climpse of a fine work by Henner, and when one is accessible, it is worth while to go out of one is accessible, it is worth while to go out of our way to see it. Pictures by Henner are rare, not so much because he does not paint as rapidly as the average artist of equal ability, but because there is scarcely another to be mentioned with so pronounced an individuality of style. His work is noted for its strength and of style. His work is noted for its strength and richness of coloring, and also for a peculiar type of face that is seen in no pictures but his. The face is an uncommon, almost an ideal one, and in spite of the fact that he works at different times from various models, he always manages to invest his pictures with the same peculiar characteristics. An excellent example of this artist's work may now be seen at the Gillespie galiery, where it will undoubtedly attract a great deal of attention. The style of this work is very much like that of the old masters, the color being noticeably after the manner of the color being noticeably after the manner of

THAT Mr. Fred Busman, the well-known vocal teacher, has on several occasions given evidence of a considerable degree of shillty as a painter, both in the matter of native talent and acquired skill, is a fact very well-known to his numerous friends; and if any further proof could be required, it is furnished by the plocould be required, it is furnished by the ploture which he has at present on exhibition at Boyd's. The subject of this painting, which is a large-sized work in oil, is a scene on Point creek, near Scalp Level. The spot is a familiar one to visitors to that pictureaque locality, it being situated but a few minutes' wait below the village, and is one of the most easily accessible points in the famous glen through which the waters of the creek finds its way over a bed of stone. Mr. Busman is accustomed to take up his brush and palette in such odd moments as do not interfere with the pursuit of his profession, and the picture in question is one upon which he has worked in this manner at different times during the past two years.

There are two pictures by Mr. H.S. Stevenson THERE are two pictures by Mr. H.S. Stevenson shown at Boyd's. The first is an excellently well-handled water color, and is unquestionably as fine a work of its class as this artist has ever produced; the second is in oil, and, though possessed of some good qualities, is by no means one of Mr. Stevenson's best efforts. The water color referred to is a landscape showing a broad stretch of level country, bounded in the distance by a belt of trees, and the foreground composed of a luxuriant marshy growth of long, rank grass. The whole effect of this work is artistic; it is good in composition and has been very effectively handled. The subject of the second picture is a shady spot beside a small stream where a woman and a young girl are seen engaged in washing clothes. This picture is better in conception than execution, and would be still more effective if the two trees were not so nearly alike, and from a technical standpoint of criticism, it would be improved by being brought to a higher degree or finish and a greater elaboration of detail. These are two works by the same artist, between which there is no comparison as regards the satisfaction they afford the beholder. In examining the one we are impressed with a sense of fulness and completeness of the work being finished and the story fully told; when looking at the other we become aware of a sense of vacancy, of something wanting and we feel but little inthe foreground composed of a luxuriant marshy and the story tany only when tooking at the other we become aware of a sense of vacancy, of something wanting, and we feel but little inducement to prolong our study, since all that is to be seen is on the surface and may be taken in with even a hurried glance.

Among other difficulties that artists have to ontend with, the fading and otherwise undergoing alteration to which certain pigments are liable is very well known and understood, but few persons outside of the charmed circle of artists or art students are aware that in addiartists or art students are aware that in addition to this failing certain colors have the quality of destroying each other in mixture. Many colors that are perfectly safe if used alone or in mixture with the majority of other pigments in general use, are tatal to the harmony of a picture if used together, for they will quarrel chemically as sure as acids and alkalis, if they chance to come in contact with each other. Thus, orpiment is destroyed by white lead, and a brilliant green produced by an admixture of cadmium with emerald green changes in the course of a few weeks' time to a dull and dirty-looking tint of color, vastly different from its original condition. White lead, a color in almost universal use, and one that will probably continue so for the reason that nothing has been found or is likely to be found that artists will accept in its place, nothing that is found so satisfactory in working, and nothing with which the artistic effects can so readily be produced; but, for all that, white lead is a color that can not safely be mixed with all other colors, and even when used alone it turns yellow with age, or blackens if it comes in contact with sulphuretted hydrogen gas. The whites made from sine and from chromate of baryta are almost perfect chromatically, that is, they will helther turn yellow nor blacken under any ordinary conditions. But both of these pigments are too thin and weak, and they lack the peculiar richness of white lead; they have not snifictent body for solid painting, and few artists can be induced to use them throughout a picture, but they compromise and use lead in those positions least likely to suffer from exposure.

The comrades of Allegheny county are to be congratulated that their distinguished guest, Commander in Chief Russel A. Alger, and the other honored geutlemen whose presence was incident to the General's visit, were so royally entertained. Of all the entertainments accorded General Alger in his travels in different sections none equaled that of Allegheny county. The General appreciated this fact and our county is proud and happy.

The reception at Old City Hall was not as large as was expected or as it would have been had it not been for a misunderstanding

Intersection at Old City Hall was not as large as was expected or as it would have been had it not been for a misunderstanding growing out of the published announcement that General Alger was to arrive on Thursday and that the reception would take place then. The audience was a representative one, however, and an enthusiastic one, duly appreciating the excellent addresses.

The specches at the ball were well covered in yesterday's papers. Captain William McClelland officiated admirably as chairman. Comrade W. A. Patterson delivered the address of welcome. General Alger delivered the principal address; his position on the pension question will abe commended by every true and loyal citizen of these great United States. Assistant Adjutant General James McCormick, Assistant Quartermaster General H. W. Williams, General Logan's son, John A. Jr., Department Commander Stewart, Chill Hazzard and National Junior Vice Commander Lovett, of New Jersey, the invited guests, all talked interestingly.

After the audience had shaken the hand of General Alger, the distinguished comrade, with the livited guests and a few local Grand Army celebrilies, repaired to the Hotel Duquesne, where a banquet, the grandeur of which is seldom eclipsed, was tendered the Cammander-in-Chief. The table was beautifully decorated with the choicest flowers; the menu was on a plane with the finest, and the responses to the appropriate toasts were indeed grand.

Comrade A. P. Burchfield abiy officiated as toast master. The toast, the "Grand Army of the evening. "The Department of Pennsylvania" was the toast assigned Department Commander Stewart, and we all know his vigorous, happy and encouraging style. Major J. F. Denniston talked about the "Working. Comrade" in his usual excellent manner. The "Fraternity of the G. A. R.," the "Volunteer Soldier," and the "Soldier and Civilian" were responsed to the toast the "Loyal Women of 61 to '65" by Comrade Chill W. Hazzard. Comrade James McCormick talked touchingly about an hour after midnight.

Much credit is

with And Lang syne about an hour save midnight.

Much credit is due the Committee on Arrangementa, Comrades Edward Fisher, J. L. Graham and Max Klein, for the success of the affair. The Reception Committee was composed of Comrades A. P. Burchfield, William J. Patterson, J. F. Denniston, Thomas G. Sample, William McClelland and A. C. Frank. The banquet card was very pretty, the menu, toasts, etc. being on separate cards, neatly fastened with a red, white and blue ribboo.

A Successful Run. The fair of Post 157 closed the fourth week of its operations last night. Marked success has attended this effort of the post. The programme for the present week is as follows: The fair proper, with dancing, will continue as usual Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, usual Monday, Tuesday and wednesday. Bat-tery B will give an exhibition drill on Thurs-day evening, to which everybody will be ad-mitted free. Friday and Saturday will be de-voted entirely to dancing. The dancing hall will be enlarged to accommode the large audi-ence expected. Admission as usual 10 and 25

During the first balf of the week all goods on the books will be sold to the best bidders for cash. Those wanting to supply themselves with Christmas presents cheap should be on hand early. The fair will close on next Saturday night.

The Fair of Post 155. The fair of Post 155, Mt. Washington, will commence on the 18th inst. with the most fav-orable prospects. The ladies of the Grand Army of Circle No. 52, are bard at work and it is questionable whether anyone entering is questionable whether anyone entering Slater's Rink during the continuance of the entertainment will get out as rich as he entered, except for goods. The motto is to let no man guilty of having a dollar escape, and it will be acted up to, as the post needs the money badly, having had such a heavy mortality within the last few years, which, if it continue at the same rate, will render the organization almost extinct in a couple of years more. The relief and burial funds are consequently in need of recuperation.

A Touching Meeting. Charlie Howe, who lost all his relatives except a brother in the Johnstown flood came to Pittaburg, was refused assistance by the Re-lief Committee and helped by the Ladles of the Grand Army as a soldier's orphan, is now doing well. Mrs. C. V. Sherriff, Department doing well. Mrs. C. V. Sherriff, Department President, while making her rounds of inspection of the circles saw the boy at Joinstown, and be could scarcely speak from his emotions of gratitude at having been saved from sickness hunger and naxedness by the ladies of the G. A. R. when ignored by other sources of relief. Mrs. Sherriff was as much pleased to see the boy getting along as he was to meet her from whom he got his first comfortable meal after the family disaster.

The fair which Post 41 decided to hold because all its funds are locked up in the Lawrence Bank will be inaugurated on Monday, December 18.

It will be in Citizens' Car building, corner of Forty-first and Butler streets. The arrangements are well under way, the dancing platform and the booths are being erected, electric lights are being put in, and everything is in a good state of progression. The decorations will be elaborate. good state of progression.

DOLLS' FANCY DRESS BALL.

Reunien of Three Generations of Dolla Held Yesterday. A great social event was the "dolla" fancy dress ball" given yesterday afternoon by Fleishman & Co. All the little folks in the Twin Cities had been invited to partici-pate in the festivities of the gala occasion, and they had responded to the invitat by the scores.

The event was a grand requion of the large and extensive family of "dolls," and, arrayed in most bewitching toilets, were all relatives of that well-known family for three generations. Grandparents, parents and children.

A great deal of curiosity was evinced by the spectators to see the "beauties" of that family, which is renowned for its handsome members, and they were all there, blonden and brunettes, and, like all beauties, were not averse to being gazed at. If they are at all inclined to be vain the admiration expressed on all sides must most certainly have turned their cunning little heads. A great many of the young ladies' dolls were invited by the little folks' mammas to visit them during the coming winter, so it is very likely a large delegation of the samily will grace private social gatherings during the
